

Information Energy is an online conference for the global community of technical communication.

At this three-day event from Wednesday to Friday, we expect about 300 – 500 attendees. It will bring together members of the global tech comm community to explore current and future trends in technical communication. Topics range from AI and other new technologies in TC to content strategy, professional development, and the business value of TC.

The entire event will be hosted online via Zoom, providing easy access for attendees around the world.

The conference language is English.
